‘You know you’re okay in a breakup when your first thought is not “What did I do wrong?” [but] “That was the dumbest decision of your life, and you’re going to regret it forever.”’

—ZENDAYA, on splitting from her “first love,” to Vogue

‘I just want to be happy. If that’s me just being myself, then I don’t really care.’

—SELENA GOMEZ, on being open about her relationship with boyfriend the Weeknd, on On Air with Ryan Seacrest

‘When suddenly you go from being followed in Barneys to being fawned over, it will mess with your head.’

—MAHERSHALA ALI, on racial discrimination he faced before his Moonlight fame, to GQ

‘We’re both just weird enough for each other. He’s my perfect little weirdo, and I’m his perfect little weirdo.’

—CAMERON DIAZ, on what makes her and husband Benji Madden’s marriage work, at the “In Goop Health” wellness summit

‘I felt like I lost 150 lbs. after. I was so tired of not being myself.’

—COLTON HAYNES, on coming out as gay, on Radio Andy

‘Let’s face it . . . I’m the Mommy and the Daddy. I don’t care what the papers say.’

—MADONNA, wishing herself a Happy Father’s Day, on Instagram

Q&A

Anna Chlumsky

The Emmy-nominated actress, 36, stars in HBO’s hit series Veep

What do you love about your character Amy Brookheimer?

There’s got to be something, right? [Laughs] I love her tenacity; it’s that alpha female thing. She just brings it, and everybody else be damned.

You also joined the final season of AMC’s drama Halt and Catch Fire. What drew you to it?

It’s pure storytelling. It’s crazy the amount of brain power and human power that has gone through the tech world into how we live today.

How do you like to spend a day off?

At least one walk outside with my family and a good meal and taking advantage of New York City. A day that’s not planned so much that you can’t breathe.

What has kept you grounded?

I mean, I suppose just having a good set of priorities. I always try to be as pragmatic as possible; that’s just who I am.

My condolences to the family of Conrad Roy III. I couldn't believe one human could encourage another to commit suicide. Horrific.
Margaret Dutton via e-mail

What kind of person actively encourages someone to kill himself? I feel justice has at least been somewhat served by the judge finding Michelle Carter culpable in the suicide of Conrad. She should have let his family know he was having serious difficulties with life and urged them to get him to a doctor. Instead, she not only encouraged but pressured the young man to kill himself.

Cosby outside the Montgomery County Courthouse after the judge called a mistrial.

Bill Cosby's Mistrial

On June 17 a Pennsylvania judge declared a mistrial in the sexual-assault case against Bill Cosby, 79, after the jury said it was "hopelessly deadlocked" for the second time. The ailing comedian was on trial for allegedly drugging and sexually assaulting former Temple University employee Andrea Constand, now 44, at his Elkins Park, Pa., mansion in 2004. (He has denied similar allegations from more than 60 women.) Cosby's lawyer, Brian McMonagle, said, "Mr. Cosby's power is back, it's back. It has been restored." Montgomery County District Attorney Kevin Steele vowed to retry the case: "We hope that moving forward in this case sends a strong message that victims of these types of crimes can come forward and be heard." —K.C. BACHELOR SCANDAL

PARADISE LOST

BY CHRISTINA DUGAN

A WEEK AFTER production on ABC's Bachelor in Paradise was halted following concerns over a filmed sexual encounter between contestants DeMario Jackson and Corinne Olympios, there are no signs the flap will end quickly or quietly. Olympios, 25, who has retained high-powered Hollywood attorney Marty Singer, says she was too drunk to remember her experiences with Jackson, 30, on the resort set of Paradise in Sayulita, Mexico. "I am a victim and have spent the last week trying to make sense of what happened on June 4," she said in a statement. "Although I have little memory of that night, something bad →

REALITY GONE WRONG Since the incident, Olympios (above, June 18, with boyfriend Jordan Gielchinsky), has sought therapy for "emotional trauma" related to her experience.

obviously took place, which I understand is why production on the show has now been suspended. . . . As a woman, this is my worst nightmare." For his part, Jackson denies any wrongdoing. "His interaction with Corinne was consensual," says his attorney, Walter Mosley. "The tapes [of the encounter] are going to bear that out." In a statement Jackson himself said, "It's unfortunate that my character and family name has been assassinated this past week with false claims and malicious allegations."

None of it is good news for the producers of Paradise, a popular spinoff of the Bachelor franchise. Others who were on-set during the incident are still puzzling through what went so terribly wrong. At first "we kept filming," says contestant Jasmine Goode. "There was never any moment that I thought that [Corinne] felt unsafe." But Olympios's lawyer says she had too much to drink and producers should have stepped in. "We're going to see if she was in a situation where the producers should have shut this down sooner," says Singer. "Because it was obvious something went significantly wrong here." Thus far no legal action has been taken. Warner Bros., which produces the series, says it's taking the matter very seriously. "We have suspended production, and we are conducting a thorough investigation of these allegations," the studio said in a statement. "Once the investigation is complete, we will take appropriate responsive action." —Additional reporting by Char Adams, Janine Rubenstein and Gillian Telling

KATY PERRY & ORLANDO BLOOM

A TALE OF TWO PUPPIES

Since news of Katy Perry and Orlando Bloom's split broke in February, paparazzi shots of the exes have left the Internet wondering: Are they coparenting a pooch? A day before reps for the "Swish Swish" singer, 32, and Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Men Tell No Tales star, 40, confirmed their uncoupling, Bloom posted an Instagram with what looked like Perry's teacup poodle Nugget. After Perry appeared with her pup on SNL in May, Bloom was photographed walking an eerily similar dog in L.A. Turns out Bloom doesn't share custody of Nugget: He's adopted a doppelgänger named Mighty. Each doggie has found fame: Nugget has appeared with Perry in ads for Citi's double cash card, while Mighty has hung out with Leonardo DiCaprio and Tobey Maguire. —JEFF NELSON

MIGHTY

"Always on my mind," Bloom captioned a shot of Mighty, who often pops up in Bloom's social media feed.

HEART MONITOR

A CHECKUP ON THE LATEST CELEBRITY ROMANCES

THEY'RE AN ITEM

Drew Barrymore & David Hutchinson

The Santa Clarita Diet actress is dating David Hutchinson, a senior vice president at Maesa, the company that manufactures her Flower Beauty line. The pair were spotted June 16 at XS Nightclub at the Wynn Las Vegas, where they sipped drinks at Norwegian EDM star Kygo's set. Romance rumors first swirled after Barrymore, 42, tagged the exec on Instagram. The coupling comes 10 months after the lifestyle maven split from husband Will Kopelman, with whom she shares daughters Olive, 4, and Frankie, 3.

NEW ROMANCE

Meredith Salenger & Patton Oswalt

The comedian, 48, is seeing actress Salenger, 47. The pair met through mutual friend Martha Plimpton. Oswalt's wife, Michelle McNamara (the mother of daughter Alice, 8), died last April. "It's new," says a source of the romance. "The e very happy."

Padma Lakshmi & Adam Dell

Have the Top Chef host, 46, and the venture capitalist, 47, rekindled a romance? Five years after settling a custody battle over daughter Krishna, 7, the exes have reunited in public (most recently June 16 at the Food & Wine Classic in Aspen) and online (in a June 18 Instagram post).

GOING STRONG!

Blake Shelton & Gwen Stefani

"Blake and Gwen are each other's biggest supporters," a source says of the musicians, who took their romance public in November 2015 after meeting on The Voice. "They're so in love, and Blake loves spending time with her kids, who adore him," adds the source of Shelton and Stefani, 47, who has three sons—Kingston, 11, Zuma, 8, and Apollo, 3—with ex Gavin Rossdale. On June 18 the No Doubt alum celebrated the country singer's 41st birthday, sharing a mid-smooch selfie on Instagram.

CHORD OVERSTREET

FINDING HIS RHYTHM AFTER GLEE

Back when he was playing jock Sam Evans on Glee, Chord Overstreet spent time between takes jotting down lyrics. "Then I'd go into Matthew Morrison's office and try them on the guitar," says the 28-year-old Tennessean. The FOX hit ended its run in 2015, but Overstreet has found a new voice as a singer. In February he released the soulful pop ballad "Hold On" and followed it up with an EP. Now he's working on completing his first full-length album. "I'm going to make it as fun as possible," he says of the record. "I just want to be able to show my personality and let people get to know me." And he's got some great guidance: his dad, Paul, a Grammy-winning country singer/songwriter. "He gives fatherly advice, but I also really value his opinion on a professional level," says the singer. "I like running my stuff through a filter." Overstreet may have music in his genes, but he credits Glee with honing his craft. "It was a boot camp in the best way," he says. "I learned more than I could have ever learned from acting or singing classes."

—LINDSAY KIMBLE

"I was still afraid to sing in front of people before Glee," says Overstreet (as Evans, above, and with dad Paul, left).

Whitlock revs his engine in Cars 3, out now.

ISIAH WHITLOCK JR.

A CAR WITH A MESSAGE

He's best known for playing a corrupt politician on HBO's gritty crime classic The Wire, but Isiah Whitlock was excited to sign on to voice an auto in Cars 3—and not just because kids love the Disney Pixar franchise. The actor's car River Scott is inspired by Wendell Scott, the first African-American to find success on the NASCAR circuit. "He was in an all-white sport in the Jim Crow South," says Whitlock, 62, who hopes audiences will get a sense of the black contribution to racing history. But when it comes to his own time behind the wheel, he doesn't put the pedal to the metal: "I'm a very slow driver; it's gonna remain that way." —ALE RUSSIAN

RAMONA SINGER

'I Regret' My RHONY Rampage

Ramona Singer is sorry for her bad behavior in the Berkshires, captured on her Bravo reality show. "I regret all the drama," Singer, 60, says of a trip to Real Housewives of New York City costar Dorinda Medley's home in rural Massachusetts, which ended with Singer allegedly causing thousands of dollars in damage to a guest room after calling off-again friend and Skinnygirl mogul Bethenny Frankel a "bitch." "If I could take it all back, I wish I could have walked away and turned and left the room when the fighting started," she says. "When a mature person feels like that, they walk away." A show source says the rift with Frankel took time to heal: "The repercussions from the fight carry on for another eight episodes, but things finally do get better between the two of them."

—DAN WAKEFORD

KIRSTEN DUNST

THE BEGUILED ACTRESS, 35, TALKS LIFE AFTER CHILD STARDOM AND WEDDING PLANS

> 'IF YOU FIND THE RIGHT PERSON, IT'S AMAZING'
> —ON HER ENGAGEMENT TO JESSE PLEMONS

You started working at age 3. Did you always want to be an actor?
I was that little girl who made home movies and put on plays with my family members. I definitely always had it in me. My mom is very creative, and my dad is very sensitive—it was a good combo to make an actor.

What did you love about filming your new movie The Beguiled in Louisiana?
We ate our way through New Orleans! We'd go to Frenchmen Street a lot, where all the music is. Elle [Fanning] would sleep over at my house. She's like a little sister to me. It's just a good group of women that [director] Sofia Coppola surrounds herself with.

Do you ever watch your older films when they're on TV?
I'll stop for a second and move on. I don't finish the movie. Like with Interview with the Vampire, it's weird. It's like [watching] a different person; it's funny.

What do you love to do most when you're not working?
I'm very good at bed days—eating, watching movies and television in bed. I love a bed day.

Who's the cat in your Instagram photos?
That's Tito! He does bed days with me too. He's a street cat I started feeding, and he became my cat.

What's the best thing about working in the same business as your fiancé and former Fargo costar, Jesse Plemons?
Having time off. With our job you can work three months intensely, and then you have a lot of time to do whatever you want to do.

What excites you most about your future?
I bought a house. I'm redoing that, and I'm going to get married at some point, so I've got to plan that! Fun things I've watched my friends do I now get to do.

Is there a plan for the wedding and then kids?
I'm not in any rush. I'm very relaxed when it comes to those kinds of things. I'm very happy.

—KARA WARNER

DIANA ROSS

MUSIC, MOTHERHOOD AND EMBRACING 'MATURITY'

'WHAT A SPECIAL TIME IT IS FOR ME IN MY LIFE'

It's hard to imagine that with over 50 years in entertainment Diana Ross hasn't done it all. But as the icon, 73, prepares to headline the upcoming Essence Festival in New Orleans for the first time on June 30, she tells People she's just as excited as her fans. "I so look forward to it," says Ross, who's currently on her Endless Memories nationwide tour. "What a special time it is for me in my life to still be able to enjoy music and the beautiful audiences and all the love." (Like People, Essence is a Time Inc. brand.) Ross—who notched her first No. 1 hit, "Where Did Our Love Go?" with the Supremes in 1964 before going on to an epic solo career—says that these days, "maturity brings a lot of clarity and understanding and a relaxed freedom and joy to love it all." Her life now revolves around her family. The single star is a mom of five from her relationship with Motown head Berry Gordy and two marriages. The entire clan feted her oldest son, Ross, at his wedding this month—and there's more family time to come in New Orleans. "My daughter Rhonda is also performing, and Tracee [Ellis Ross of black-ish] will be there in all of her glory, along with my son Evan and his wife, Ashlee [Simpson]. It's going to be a huge family affair!"

ONE to WATCH

"The best nights are always rough nights," says Downs of his new film.

ROUGH NIGHT'S PAUL DOWNS

The comedian, 35, best known as Trey Pucker on Broad City, makes his movie debut in the raunchy comedy Rough Night as Scarlett Johansson's fiancé. He cowrote the movie alongside his girlfriend and comedy partner Lucia Aniello. "We didn't write the role with Scarlett in mind, but when she came up, we knew it was right," he says. As for his success in two female-driven projects, "I prefer working with women," says the Duke grad. "Let's be honest—they are funnier than men." —GILLIAN TELLING

JESSICA ST. CLAIR

FACING CANCER, FINDING LAUGHTER

In 2015 Jessica St. Clair, star of the USA comedy Playing House, was feeding her 23-month-old daughter Isobel breakfast when "I touched my own boob—I don't know why," she says, and discovered a lump in her breast. Within days the actress, now 40, was diagnosed with stage 2B estrogen positive breast cancer. "I remember thinking I will do anything and everything I need to do to stay alive for my daughter and make sure this has the least amount of impact on her life," says St. Clair. As she underwent chemotherapy, radiation and a double mastectomy, he comic—who created her female-driven friendship series with collaborator and costar Lennon Parham—wrote the ordeal into their show. "I knew we were going to have to tell the story, because Lennon and I always write about what we're going through in real life," she says. "But we were terrified we wouldn't be able to do it in a funny way." Somehow they found the humor in the experience. "Lennon chose my new boobs," says St. Clair, who also leaned on her husband, playwright Dan O'Brien, for support. "The plastic surgeon came out with a suitcase of boobs lined in velvet, like it was Tiffany's. I didn't question her judgment. Whatever my best friend said to put in my body, I did. So many things you'll see in our show are exactly what happened."

It wasn't always easy to make light of her diagnosis, which she didn't make public until she wrote an essay for Stand Up to Cancer in May. "There was a lot of crying in the writers' room," says St. Clair, who is now in remission. "But also a lot of laughter—just like there was in real life."

—PATRICK GOMEZ

'I DIDN'T WANT [MY DAUGHTER] TO BE AFRAID FOR ONE SECOND THAT HER MOM WAS SICK'

"I hope people watch the show and feel less alone," says St. Clair, 40, on Playing House with Parham (center) and Lindsay Sloane.

Veteran People Editor Dies

Respected New York journalist Larry Sutton, who died suddenly at 64, was known for his unparalleled talent and charm

He was, remembered a colleague, "the kind of guy you signed up to do journalism with." He was also the kind you felt lucky to call your friend. And when People (and People Books) editor and former seasoned New York Daily News reporter Larry Sutton died on June 17, he left a galaxy of the lucky. Throughout his four-decade career—he began as a stringer for the News in the early 1970s—he thrived under deadline pressures that could make others wilt. He was a virtuoso with virtue who wrote with clarity, speed and the same unfailing, true-north grace and good humor that made his friends, in high places and low, legion. Among the tributes that filled Sutton's Facebook timeline to overflowing was one from a fellow cast member of the New York press fraternity's Inner Circle satirical revue, for which Sutton had served as chief writer and performer: "Our stage is a little smaller and emptier without Larry." Make that a lot. —BY STEVE DOUGHERTY, LONGTIME FRIEND AND COLLEAGUE

A Family's Anguish

American student released from a North Korean prison dies

University of Virginia student Otto Warmbier, 22, died on June 19, just days after returning home to Cincinnati in a coma following 17 months of imprisonment in North Korea. In an emotional statement, his family said, "Unfortunately, the awful torturous mistreatment our son received at the hands of the North Koreans ensured that no other outcome was possible." Warmbier had been sentenced to 15 years in prison for allegedly trying to steal a political propaganda poster from his Pyongyang hotel during a group tour in January 2016. Just over a year later he was released by North Korean officials, who told a U.S. official that Warmbier had contracted botulism and slipped into the coma after taking a sleeping pill. Upon his return on June 13, doctors at the University of Cincinnati Medical Center discovered extensive loss of brain tissue, which they suspected was a result of cardiopulmonary arrest. "He looked very uncomfortable—almost anguished," his family said in their statement. "Although we would never hear his voice again, within a day the countenance of his face changed—he was at peace. He was home, and we believe he could sense that.… We are at peace and at home too." —ERIN HILL

PERSONAL STORIES ABOUT GIVING BACK

Rachel Zoe

The celebrity stylist, 45, is helping raise awareness about ovarian cancer

Ovarian cancer is something that is very close to my heart. Two years ago my mother lost her best friend to the disease. This woman was like an aunt to me. It was devastating to watch firsthand. I first got involved with the Ovarian Cancer Research Fund Alliance through their annual Super Saturday fund-raiser. I went as a supporter, and then they asked me to be on the committee and get more involved. One hundred percent of the proceeds from this event go to prevention, diagnosis and treatment. The thing about ovarian cancer is that it is a very silent killer. It's hard to detect it, and by the time you do, it's often too late. I think it is extremely important, especially if you have a family history, that you are militant about going to the doctor regularly and getting the proper exams. The best thing you can do for yourself is to stay on top of it. I have a history of breast cancer in my family with my sister, mother and grandmother, so I do beyond what a normal woman does when it comes to exams. If you don't go to the doctor and just avoid it, that doesn't work with cancer. It's better to know than not know.

Enemy territory: Southern schoolmistress Kidman takes in wounded Yankee soldier Farrell.

No. 1

The Beguiled

Nicole Kidman and Colin Farrell star in a bewitchingly strange tale set during the Civil War

MOVIE DRAMA A Union soldier named McBurney (Colin Farrell), wounded in the Virginia woods, receives shelter, medical attention and many soft, mourning-dove coos of longing from the ladies of Miss Martha Farnsworth's academy for girls. As he slyly seduces both Miss Farnsworth (Nicole Kidman) and her assistant Edwina (a superb Kirsten Dunst), McBurney thinks he's lucked into a confederacy of virginal dunces. He hasn't. Director Sofia Coppola underplays the story's melodramatic extremes, concentrating instead on creating an atmosphere of hushed, rarefied intensity. In its oblique but fascinating way, Beguiled is an allegory of women subjugated by men—a prettier, genteel Handmaid's Tale. Coppola, who won Best Director at Cannes, is a singular talent: She drapes the movie with a heavy layer of moss that somehow makes you that much more aware of the tree. (In limited release June 23, R)

No. 2 Prime Suspect: Tennison

TV DRAMA No one really needs a prequel to Prime Suspect, the British crime series that made an international star of Helen Mirren. Her performance as Jane Tennison, a middle-aged woman rising to the top of a sexist police force thanks to her fierce integrity, was so fully realized you could imagine the character's life all the way back to nappies. But Stefanie Martini isn't bad as a 22-year-old Jane in 1973, and the initial case has a fine cast of actors (Ruth Sheen, Alun Armstrong) looking shifty. (PBS, June 25, check local listings)

Martini plays the famous future chief inspector.

Swinton, Hyun and (inset) Okja the superpig.

No. 3 Okja

The world goes dangerously hog wild

NETFLIX FANTASY Mija (An Seo Hyun), a girl in rural South Korea, has spent 10 happy years raising Okja, an enormous, genetically engineered female superpig. (She's closer to a hippo than Babe.) But Okja isn't a pet—she's the prototype for a new, abundantly meaty protein source to feed a hungry planet, and the time has come for this piggy to go to market. Mija will have to rescue her from Lucy Mirando, a powerful businesswoman who's also desperately starved for approval. Swinton is terrifyingly funny as this unstable monster: It's as if Cruella De Vil thought of herself as Mother Teresa. By the way, this satiric fairy tale is not for kids. It will disturb even the most enthusiastic carnivore. (Netflix, June 28)

No. 4 Imagine Dragons, Evolve

MUSIC POP-ROCK Since debuting in 2012, the Las Vegas quartet has evolved into a powerhouse. The band's sonic DNA is made up of hard-rocking guitars, anthemic pop hooks and rave-ready EDM drops. On LP No. 3, frontman Dan Reynolds unleashes his hair-raising howl on arena-ready, socially charged singalongs like "Rise Up." (June 23)

IMAGINE DRAGONS

Foster (right) with costar Hillary Duff.

No. 5 Younger

TV COMEDY Season 4 of the bright little sitcom finds Liza (Sutton Foster) sinking ever further into the moral bog of being a fortysomething trying to pass for a millennial in the Manhattan publishing world. Guest star Kristin Chenoweth steals the first episode as a Kellyanne Conway clone pitching a tell-all, It's True Because I'm Shouting It. "After 20 years behind the scenes of shaping policy and perception," she says, "I'm ready to take a good long leak." (TV Land, June 28, 10 p.m.)

Brie as a lady wrestler.

No. 6 GLOW

Alison Brie is not quite ready to rumble

NETFLIX COMEDY Ruth Wilder (Mad Men's Alison Brie) is an unemployed actress whose background and skill set tend toward the precious (she trained at a theater in Omaha and can do an impersonation of Audrey Hepburn accepting her Oscar). Out of desperation she auditions for—and, wildly against type, gets cast in—Gorgeous Ladies of Wrestling (or GLOW), an actual 1980s TV series that featured women going all glam-slam in the ring. In concept this isn't too far removed from the sort of movie Shelley Long did back in the day, but the opening episodes have a jostling vitality as the ladies get a grip on their new public identities as big-haired bruisers. (Netflix, launches June 23)

No. 7 Broadchurch

TV DRAMA This outstanding crime series, set in a small coastal community in southwest Britain, wraps up with a third, final season focused on a woman named Trish Winterman (Julie Hesmondhalgh). A victim of sexual assault, she struggles to remember the night in question—but something other than trauma keeps her from revealing the whole story to detectives Hardy and Miller (David Tennant and Olivia Colman). Trish is one of Broadchurch's great complex, commonplace enigmas: On any given street, in any given house, you'll find someone whose entire existence has fallen beneath a secret shadow. (BBC America, June 28)

No. 8 Beth Ditto, Fake Sugar

MUSIC ALTERNATIVE For 17 years Beth Ditto fronted the indie rock band Gossip, earning comparisons to Janis Joplin and Tina Turner thanks to her killer wail. The band found mainstream success with the disco-punk hit "Heavy Cross" in 2009 before splitting last year. On her debut solo album, she continues to toy with Gossip's genre-spanning sound while also tapping into her Arkansas roots: The album is infused with southern rock 'n' soul. Whether it's a glittering stomper ("Oo La La") or stripped-down Stevie Nicks homage (the title track), Ditto shines throughout, making Fake Sugar a sweet treat.

After five studio albums with Gossip, Ditto is now a buzzed-about solo star.

A new generation of Rangers.

No. 9 Saban's Power Rangers

DVD+STREAMING ACTION This big-screen reboot morphs the TV superhero fantasy, a cherished if cheesy after-school memory from the 1990s, into a full-scale movie that can flex some muscle in the age of Marvel blockbusters. Elizabeth Banks adds some bite as villain Rita Repulsa. (June 27)

No. 10 The Big Sick

You'll laugh till you cry—seriously

MOVIE COMEDY-DRAMA Kumail and Emily (Silicon Valley's Kumail Nanjiani and Zoe Kazan) meet cute—she playfully disrupts his stand-up act—but the cuteness drops away quickly: Worried about upsetting his Muslim parents, Kumail bungles the relationship and loses Emily. Then she becomes very, very ill, and her desperate parents (Holly Hunter and Ray Romano) don't welcome his sorrowful, renewed devotion. Sick, based on Nanjiani's own life with now-wife Emily V. Gordon, has wonderful acting, deep pockets of emotion and some nicely off-the-wall writing ("You look like a children's toy from Malaysia"). It may well be the romantic comedy of the year. (In limited release June 23, R)

JAY Z AND BEYONCE

The Twins Are Here!

AS A PAIR OF NEWBORNS JOIN 5-YEAR-OLD BLUE IVY, MUSIC'S MOST POWERFUL COUPLE ARE CHANGING THEIR LIVES TO RAISE THEIR GROWING FAMILY By MELODY CHIU

Crazy in Love "After settling down in L.A., they live a much more quiet life. They love being parents," says an insider of the couple (in 2015).

For a long while Jay Z and Beyoncé were the proud parents of one adorable kid, regulars at Brooklyn pizza joints and Knicks games and firmly in an Empire State of mind. But over the past year and a half, the R&B royals and 5-year-old daughter Blue Ivy have gradually shifted their lives west to Los Angeles. Leaving behind their 8,300-sq.-ft. Tribeca penthouse and a slew of sweet Manhattan memories—Beyoncé gave birth to Blue at a swanky Upper East Side hospital—the former New York mainstays made the change for one very important reason: their expanding family. After setting Instagram ablaze in February with a record-setting post announcing her pregnancy, the "Formation" singer, 35, and the rapper, 47, have now welcomed twins to their family, multiple sources confirm to People. As of press time the fiercely private couple hadn't released the names, sexes or birth date of their new additions, who arrived at an L.A.-area hospital, but "they've started sharing the news with their family and closest friends," says a source close to the superstars. "Bey and Jay are thrilled." Grandpa Mathew Knowles confirmed the joyful event June 18 on Instagram: "They're here!"

And ready for the Bey-bies to upend their lives even more. With 43 Grammys and a reported billion-dollar fortune between them, Jay Z and Beyoncé are two of the busiest entertainers in Hollywood. But after going public with her pregnancy and making a splashy performance at the Grammy Awards in February, Beyoncé took a noticeable step back from the limelight, and Jay Z too has stayed close to home while working on his new album, 4:44. (On June 19 he was spotted working out at SoulCycle before heading to the hospital.) "Before Blue started preschool, they were practically globetrotters," says an insider. "It was very surprising when they decided to settle down in L.A." But they decided to trade in jetsetting for school runs so their daughter could have more "stability," and now both stars are familiar faces at Blue's private school. "They show up for events and fund-raisers," says the insider. "They act like very normal parents." Adds

Her Ultra-Glam Pregnancy Style

Beyoncé showed off her growing bump in everything from custom Gucci to hand-painted henna. "She is so stunning," says singer Chloe Bailey, who along with her sister Halle is signed to the star's management company Parkwood Entertainment. "She is the flyest pregnant person I've ever seen!"

Beyoncé's pal and former Destiny's Child member LeToya Luckett: "She's a very hands-on mom. Right before this girl hits the stage, she's in her daughter's face making sure she's good. I'm like, 'You are superwoman!'" The pop diva also set a new standard for pregnancy fashion, proudly documenting her growing belly on social media in formfitting minis and thigh-high boots. "She's holding it down for so many other women that are with child," says singer and Destiny's Child alum Michelle Williams. "[She's] showing them to still be as fierce as you feel."

Over the last few months, Jay Z—who canceled his appearance at the Songwriters Hall of Fame induction ceremony on June 15 amid buzz Beyoncé had given birth—has stayed by his wife's side. Though she addressed ongoing rumors of marital drama last year in her Grammy-winning album Lemonade, sources say the pair, who celebrated their ninth anniversary in April with a romantic trip to Bora-Bora, are stronger than ever. And most importantly, they're on the same page when it comes to raising their family. "You might think that he'll be a strict dad, but he's actually a big teddy bear," Tiwa Savage, who's signed to his label Roc Nation, told People earlier this year. Beyoncé has a "patient and kind" approach to parenting, according to proud grandma Tina Knowles Lawson, and together, the duo are "incredible parents," Beyoncé's stepdad Richard Lawson gushed in April. Newly settled in a nine-bedroom, 15-bath Beverly Hills estate, the superstars are embracing a slower pace. Says the insider: "Their life is very focused on raising Blue, and it was the perfect time for more babies."

WE BELIEVE THAT THERE ARE NO PERFECT MOMS ONLY #REALMOMS

When you become a mom...

You love like you've never loved.
Grow in ways you can't imagine.
Find strengths you don't yet know you have.

Yet this new role is only part of who you are.

In fact, 94% of moms believe they are able to be a better mom if they also take care of themselves by doing the things that they love.

We believe that there's no right way to be a mom, only your way. That other moms' choices need not dictate your own. And taking care of yourself is part of taking care of your baby.

Sure, there will be days when you have it all together, and days when things seem to be falling apart.

But the fact that you even worry about being a good mom means you already are.

So to all real moms –
Whether you do it by the book,
or make it up as you go along, it's your way.

And we're with you,
every step of it.

TRUST YOUR WAY.

'DOING WHAT THEY LOVE'
Scalise (left, in '16 with Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy) is "super into the congressional baseball game," says spokeswoman Fine. "He even helped design the shirts."

TRAGEDY AT THE BALLPARK

ATTACK ON CONGRESS

The nation's latest mass shooting targeted America's lawmakers practicing America's pastime—and could have been a lot worse

The 7:20 a.m. text to Cristina Bishop at home in Michigan was a horrifying jolt: "There's been a terrible incident at the baseball field," wrote her husband, Mike, a Republican congressman. "A shooting." Rep. Bishop was practicing in Alexandria, Va., on June 14 with two dozen GOP colleagues for the next day's charity ball game when Illinois native James T. Hodgkinson allegedly walked up at 7:15 a.m., asked if the ballplayers were Republican or Democrat and opened fire. House Majority Whip Steve Scalise, 51, at second base, was hit, along with a staffer, a lobbyist and the two Capitol Police in Scalise's security detail, Crystal Griner and David Bailey, whose return fire killed Hodgkinson, 66. "If it weren't for the heroism the Capitol Police showed," Rep. Mo Brooks said, "it could very well have been a large-scale massacre."

This latest mass shooting left a politically divided nation grasping for unity—"An attack on one of us is an attack on all of us," House Speaker Paul Ryan declared—while Scalise, the nine-year House veteran from Louisiana who was the most seriously injured, underwent multiple surgeries for damage to his hip from the bullet. At press time Scalise's condition had improved from critical to serious. "He's a tank—tough," says his deputy, Rep. Patrick McHenry.

While supporters flooded Scalise's office and hospital room with what press secretary Lauren Fine called "southern comfort food" like beignets and Chick-fil-A, Bailey, on crutches due to shrapnel injuries, was back at the Capitol the next morning and threw out the first pitch when the game went on that night. "It was emotional. He and Special Agent Griner are part of the family," says Fine. "And," adds McHenry, "they saved a lot of lives."

Powerful Force "Love you, Momby," Fisher's daughter Lourd (right, in 2015) wrote in an emotional statement.

CARRIE FISHER

Battling Addiction to the End

A NEW REPORT REVEALS THE BELOVED STAR DIED WITH HEROIN AND COCAINE IN HER SYSTEM. HER DAUGHTER HOPES HER LIFE WILL INSPIRE OTHERS TO GET HELP

Carrie Fisher was brutally honest about her demons. "I couldn't stop, or stay stopped," she told People in 1987 of her lifelong struggle with substance abuse. "It was never my fantasy to have a drug problem. I'd say, 'Oh, f--- it, I haven't done anything for a couple of months, why not? Let's celebrate not doing them by doing them.' I got into trouble each time." Sadly, she was never able to dispel that darkness. On June 19 the L.A. County Coroner's Office revealed that cocaine, heroin and Ecstasy, among other drugs, were in Fisher's system at the time of her Dec. 27 death. The coroner stated that the 60-year-old Star Wars actress, who suffered a medical emergency aboard a plane, died of sleep apnea—which causes interrupted breathing—and "other undetermined factors," with the role of the drugs unclear. Those closest to her saw a tragic coda to a journey that was both brilliantly hilarious and wrenchingly sad. "My mom battled drug addiction and mental illness her entire life," Fisher's daughter Billie Lourd said in a statement to People. "She ultimately died of it."

> 'I know my mom—she'd want her death to encourage people to be open about their struggles'
> —BILLIE LOURD

Lourd, 24, is determined that her mother's candor about her bipolar disorder and addiction be a lasting part of her legacy. "She was purposefully open in all of her work about the social stigmas surrounding these diseases," the actress said. "She talked about the shame that torments people and their families confronted by these diseases. I know my mom; she'd want her death to encourage people to be open about their struggles. Seek help, fight for government funding for mental-health programs. Shame and those social stigmas are the enemies of progress to solutions and ultimately a cure." Lourd urges people in need of support to visit the Jed Foundation (jedfoundation.org), which focuses on mental health among teens and young adults. As Fisher told People in 2013, "The only lesson for me, or anybody, is that you have to get help. I'm not embarrassed."

100 REASONS TO ♥ America

IN HONOR OF Our Nation's Birthday, WE'RE CELEBRATING SOME OF OUR FAVORITE PEOPLE (LIKE CHIP AND JOANNA GAINES!) PLUS THE PLACES, THINGS AND IDEAS THAT MAKE OUR COUNTRY GREAT

"We always remind ourselves where we came from and how this all started," says Chip.

Chip & Joanna Gaines

'I DON'T SEE HOW WE COULD BE ANY HAPPIER'

THEY SPENT YEARS SACRIFICING AND SCRAPING BY BEFORE MAKING IT BIG. NOW FIXER UPPER'S CHIP AND JOANNA GAINES SAY THE SWEETEST PART OF THEIR SUCCESS IS SHARING IT WITH THEIR FAMILY—AND MAKING SURE THEY NEVER TAKE ANY OF IT FOR GRANTED

BY Emily Strohm

"Our life is kind of a circus," says Chip Gaines, surveying the sprawling 40-acre farm adjacent to the restored 1895 home in Waco, Texas, that he shares with his wife, Joanna, and their four kids. Suddenly Chip darts into the pasture, returning minutes later followed by more than 100 longhorn cows, goats and chickens marching closely behind him. Joanna shrugs at the sight. "It's definitely a circus," she agrees. "But a really fun one."

Since the premiere of their HGTV series Fixer Upper in 2013, Chip, 42, and Joanna, 39, have been on the fast track to fame, with nearly everything they touch turning to gold. After just four seasons, their reality show, which follows the pair as they find and renovate older homes for eager families, is one of the highest-rated in the network's history. But Waco is just the beginning for Chip and Joanna. "We want to inspire people across the country to be able to tell their own story in their homes," says Joanna. The couple's growing portfolio of successful businesses includes retail compound Magnolia Market at the Silos (which draws up to 40,000 visitors every week), paint, rug, wallpaper and furniture lines, plus a quarterly magazine, a real estate company, a luxury vacation rental, a soon-to-open restaurant and a New York Times bestselling book with a second in the works, Capital Gaines: Smart Things I Learned Doing Stupid Stuff. They almost make success look simple—which, of course, it hasn't been.

Life at Home

"We try to make it as normal as possible for the kids," says Joanna. "There are certain elements of our life that have definitely changed, but in our family bubble, I'm not sure the kids know the extent of it."

"Nothing has come easy," admits Chip, who met Joanna back in 2001, when he famously had nothing but a wad of cash in his pocket and she was working in her dad's automotive shop but had stashed away some sketches for her design-business dream. "We've worked so hard to have this beautiful family and this farm—it really does seem like the American dream you heard about growing up," Chip says.

He and Joanna are committed to leading by example when it comes to their four children, Drake, 12, Ella, 10,

WHAT CHIP & JOANNA HAVE DONE FOR Waco, Texas

IN JUST TWO YEARS, Chip and Joanna's popularity has helped transform the city into a must-see destination for Fixer Upper fans. Tourist numbers have tripled to 1.9 million per year, thanks in large part to Magnolia Market at the Silos, which has in turn boosted revenues for hotels and businesses. "Being a longtime Waco resident, I'm excited that my love for this city is getting to be experienced by so many visitors," says Mayor Kyle Deaver. "Chip and Joanna have been great ambassadors." The couple remain humble—and grateful. "To think that we've even had a small piece to play in that is what keeps us going," says Chip. They're hoping their celebrity status will also help them give back, not just to Waco but around the country with their Magnolia Foundation, which works to alleviate child and youth homelessness.

1. Lines to get into Magnolia Market form before the doors open at 9 a.m. 2. Their new breakfast restaurant Magnolia Table (formerly Elite Café) will open later this year. "It will be like my baby," says Chip. 3. "We love the idea of the past and simpler times," says Joanna. "At the Silos it's about taking a step back and being with the people you love." 4 & 5. Their popular Magnolia House vacation rental is booked through 2017. The property sleeps eight and rents for $695 to $995 per night.

Duke, 9, and Emmie Kay, 7. "They see us really doing what we love," says Joanna. "One of our favorite things is to bring them to work with us." Still up for discussion: adding another family member. "I would love another baby," says Joanna. "Or twins! The kids are always asking me, 'Mom, can you have another baby?'" She smiles. "But Chip thinks we're done."

Right now, at least, he wants to keep their marriage front and center. "I used to get my feelings hurt," says Chip, "because my mom and dad would always say how much they loved each other, and then they were, like, 'And we like you guys pretty well too.' But the older I get, I kind of understand that mind-set. Jo and I both made a commitment pretty early on that the two of us are the most important variable. If we can figure out how to be right as a couple, then obviously we have a lot better opportunity to be right for our kids." After 14 years of marriage, "every now and then there are times when we notice we're getting offtrack and have to regroup," says Chip. "But it's like everything we care about, everything that's important to us—we know it's going to require work."

They've got a standing date every Tuesday night, when they have a chance to really check in and spend some one-on-one time together. "I love a good steak every now and then, but we tend to frequent our local holes-in-the-wall for street tacos and queso," says Joanna. "After dinner we get ice cream and drive around Waco to go down memory lane and visit our old stomping grounds.” They also start each day by sharing a cup of coffee on the porch together before the kids wake up. “Marriage requires effort and time and talking and connecting,” says Joanna. “You have to maintain it.”

They don’t allow themselves to get sidetracked by what Joanna calls the “elevated experiences” that have come their way. “We’ve been invited to the White House,” says Chip. “We met Bono. I got to throw out a first pitch at the Texas Rangers game. Flown in an F-16 and jumped out of an airplane. All once-in-a-lifetime opportunities.” Yet Chip still wears the same uniform every day: “Boots, jeans, Wrangler top and this dirty little hat,” Joanna says. That’s because he says that he has “figured out the secret that the grass isn’t necessarily greener on the other side. Even when we were broke, even when we were struggling and just starting out, with so many babies and so many diapers, it was mind-boggling—now there are times we envy those days.” Adds Joanna: “I love the smell of clean laundry. Working in the garden and getting my hands dirty. Doing the dishes. These are the things that make me feel normal.”

Perfect Partnership

“Sometimes I wonder, ‘Why us,’ ” says Chip. “What was it that we did that was interesting and unique. The fact that people watch our show, buy our products and come to Waco to visit our store. It’s still sometimes a bit like a dream.”

And yet they will continue to push themselves further. “I think comfortable for us can be a little dangerous,” says Joanna. “The second Chip gets content, he gets really restless. It’s not about, ‘Let’s get here and then we’ll be happy.’ We like the idea of having to wrestle a little bit and figure things out. That’s where we thrive the most.”

The one thing they will never do, they say, is leave Waco. “We’ve been all over the world now,” says Chip. “But there’s something really romantic about not just saying, ‘Remember where you came from’ but really living that out.” And if their fame and fortune suddenly came to a halt, well, they’d be okay with that too. “We’ve got everything that our hearts desire,” says Chip. “I don’t see how we could be happier.”

MEGHAN MARKLE

Once upon a time, an American TV star fell in love with a handsome prince. Before she knew it, Meghan Markle, 35, was jetting to London for cozy stays at Kensington Palace—while a smitten Prince Harry, 32, was secretly flying thousands of miles just so they could spend a weekend together in her Toronto home base. Not since Grace Kelly has an American captured the heart of a true prince—and this time Markle is flipping the royal script. Proudly ambitious and independent, she is no fairy-tale princess. She's better.

CHRISTIAN SIRIANO

On the importance of dressing women of all shapes and sizes

My goal is to hopefully change people's perceptions of what's beautiful and what women should wear. I include a diverse range of sizes, races and ages on the runway. And then, there's the red carpet. I don't go after the young, new It Girl. They're fabulous, but what's exciting to me is seeing someone different on the carpet looking amazing, like Danielle Brooks [right], whom I love so much. She loves her curves, takes risks and tries new things, and her shape doesn't hold her back. Honestly I just love that I get to help change people's perceptions, and I'm proud of what we're doing. But it took me 10 years to get here, and it will take another 50 years to have my position become a little bit more of the norm. That would be really exciting.

MELINDA GATES ON THE ART OF GIVING BACK

One of the things I love most about America is that we're a nation of optimists. We're always striving to invent a better future. At the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation we look for opportunities where a relatively small investment can have an outsize impact on people's lives. That's why we invest in contraceptives around the world.

Empowered women and girls transform societies—and when women have the tools to plan and space their pregnancies, the benefits keep multiplying. Women and their babies are healthier, children grow up better-educated, and over time entire economies become more prosperous. I spend a lot of time traveling to developing countries and sitting down with women to hear about their lives, their dreams and the barriers that are standing in their way. Our foundation is a data-driven organization, but these women remind me that there are stories behind every statistic—and I've carried a lot of these stories home in my heart.

Some of my most cherished childhood memories are of family road trips through America's national parks. Bill and I have also loved sharing these parks with our own kids—because when summer rolls around, there's no better place to be than the great outdoors!

JACK SCHLOSSBERG

JFK's grandson on his country

I love America for the freedom and equality it promises all of its citizens, the battles it has fought and won in defense of those values, and the peace and prosperity we enjoy. I love that America represents a beacon of hope and opportunity in a world of uncertainty. I love that I am free to say that I don't love the new trajectory of American leadership. I am horrified by our government's proposed immigration ban, I'm embarrassed that the United States pulled out of the Paris Climate Agreement, and I'm frustrated that our government is attempting to take away health care for millions. I love how many Americans are speaking out against these developments that are antithetical to the values that have made America the greatest nation on earth. I also love the NBA finals, the Rock and the Yankees. I love making jokes on the Internet. I love protein powder. I don't love green juice, but sometimes I drink it. I'm lucky enough to enjoy these things because I live in a strong, wealthy and free nation that values individual rights and expression. I'm going to spend my life making sure that it always does.

Gianni Versace

SHOCKING MURDER SPREE 20 YEARS LATER

THE DAY VERSACE DIED

2 decades after the fashion icon's murder, the killer's motive remains a mystery

By STEVE HELLING

Gianni Versace was up early on the morning of July 15, 1997. The 50-year-old Italian-born fashion designer followed his usual daily routine, stopping by Miami Beach's trendy News Cafe to pick up a handful of magazines. By 8:45 a.m., he had just returned home and was opening the wrought-iron gates of Casa Casuarina, his 10-bedroom Mediterranean-style mansion, when a young man approached him. What happened next was never clear, but seconds later the designer had been shot twice in the head at point-blank range and was bleeding to death on his own front steps. "He was in his prime," recalls friend Hal Rubenstein. "He was like the sun. He made everything move, and suddenly he got ripped away. It was a tailspin time for everybody."

SERIAL KILLER REVEALED

Cunanan, a hustler who conned wealthy older men, had no connections to Versace and had not met him before the murder.

Even now, 20 years after the shocking murder, the twisted plot of the serial killer who took Versace's life is still a mystery. Twenty-seven-year-old Andrew Cunanan executed Versace and then killed himself on a houseboat as Miami law enforcement and the FBI closed in. Cunanan had killed at least four other victims in a three-month-long murder spree that seemed to have no consistent MO or connection between the victims. It's a case that has been the focus of countless magazine stories, movies and television shows and is now slated for Ryan Murphy's next season of American Crime Story—set to air in 2018 on FX and previewed in an exclusive first look in this week's Entertainment Weekly (see box). "[Versace] was a quick murder, almost execution style," says Miami crime scene investigations technician Berta Valdez, who helped process the scene. "One, two shots, and he was killed almost instantly. The other victims weren't so lucky."

Before shooting Versace in broad daylight, Cunanan had murdered Jeffrey Trail, 28, a former

GLAMOUR AND MURDER

1. The Miami Beach mansion where Versace was fatally shot is now a luxury boutique hotel. 2. Versace (with Donatella in 1996) founded his fashion line in 1978. In 2013 the brand was valued at $5.76 billion. 3. Four other victims were killed between April and May 1997.

EW'S EXCLUSIVE FIRST LOOK

Ryan Murphy's follow-up to The People v. O.J. Simpson explores the designer's 1997 murder. The Assassination of Gianni Versace: American Crime Story, filming now, stars (from top, clockwise) Darren Criss (as Cunanan), Penélope Cruz (as Donatella), Ricky Martin (as Versace's partner Antonio D'Amico) and Edgar Ramirez (as Versace).

U.S. Naval officer, along with David Madson, 33, an architect and Cunanan's ex-lover, in Minneapolis, killing Trail with a claw hammer and then shooting Madson with Trail's gun. He then killed Chicago millionaire real estate developer Lee Miglin, 72—whose relationship with Cunanan, if any, remains a mystery—stabbing him more than 20 times with a screwdriver and cutting his throat with a saw. And on May 9 he fatally shot William Reese, 45, a caretaker at a Pennsville, N.J., cemetery. It was Reese's truck Cunanan used to drive to Miami. “It was a shock,” says Reese's son Troy, who was 12 when his father was killed. “Why did a serial killer choose my father's cemetery to go to?”

What drove Cunanan is a question authorities still struggle with. “Investigators really didn't have what they felt was a concrete motive,” says John Kelly, a criminal profiler and serial-killer expert. “I think he wanted power and control, he was looking to be famous, and by killing Versace, he got what he wanted. He became infamous.”

Known for his close family ties in addition to his elegant and creative fashion design, Versace had burst onto the fashion scene in 1978 with a celebrity clientele that ranged from Princess Diana to Elizabeth Taylor and Elton John. Just a week before his death, he'd won rave reviews for a couture collection he unveiled in Paris. After his murder his sister Donatella shouldered overwhelming grief and the responsibility for the fashion empire's future at the same time. “All this falling on her was brutal,” says family friend Rubenstein, a fashion writer and consultant. “But she was strong, she was fierce.” And though two decades have passed since the world lost the creative giant, the family still mourns—and passionately protects the Versace name. “He has a legacy that's still vibrant, and that's the true test of somebody's greatness,” Rubenstein says. “You still think of him. And that's pretty glorious.”

NOTICE OF PENDENCY OF CLASS ACTION AND PROPOSED SETTLEMENT

If you are or were a customer of Nationstar Mortgage or Branch Banking and Trust Company ("BB&T") who received more than one telemarketing call from or on behalf of ACE American Insurance Company ("ACE") on or after October 16, 2013 to a number registered with the National Do Not Call Registry, you may be eligible to receive benefits from a proposed class action settlement.

The proposed settlement ("the Settlement") resolves a class action lawsuit in which the plaintiffs allege that these calls violated the federal Telephone Consumer Protection Act. The lawsuit makes no allegations against Nationstar Mortgage or BB&T. The two sides disagree about whether ACE's conduct was proper, whether ACE is liable, and if so, the extent of any such liability. The parties have agreed to resolve the lawsuit by a settlement. The settlement agreement resolves all claims against the parties associated with the subject calls.

You can learn more about the settlement at www.ACETCPASettlement.com or by calling 1-844-454-4157.

To read a more detailed description of the terms of the proposed Settlement and to read the full Notice of Proposed Class Action Settlement, which more fully describes your rights, please visit www.ACETCPASettlement.com or call 1-844-454-4157. If you wish to receive benefits under the Settlement, you must file a Claim Form, which is available online at www.ACETCPASettlement.com or by calling 1-844-454-4157. If the Settlement is approved by the Court, any legal action you may have against ACE related to the challenged calls will be released.

If you do not wish to be bound by the terms of this Settlement, you must exclude yourself from the Settlement. You may formally object to the Settlement. Visit www.ACETCPASettlement.com for information on how to do so.

25 YEARS AGO
PRINCESS DIANA
SHARED HER
PRIVATE PAIN
WITH THE WORLD.
NOW AUTHOR
ANDREW MORTON
SHARES WHY—AND
HOW—SHE DID IT

Diana's SECRET TAPES

Princess Diana gave few interviews in her 36 years, but she still found a way to ensure her voice was heard. In 1992 British journalist Andrew Morton published Diana: Her True Story, a headline-making biography that featured stunning revelations about Diana's private anguish amid her crumbling marriage to Prince Charles. After Diana's death in a 1997 car crash, Morton revealed his source: Diana, who secretly recorded her innermost thoughts and delivered the tapes to Morton through her friend Dr. James Colthurst. Now, 25 years later, the book is being released again, this time with a new foreword by Morton, excerpted exclusively here. "If Diana had enjoyed a full life, she probably would have written her own memoirs at some point," writes Morton. "Sadly that is no longer possible. The testimony which follows is her life story as she wanted to tell it. . . . No one can deny her that."

In 1991 Princess Diana was approaching 30. She had been in the limelight all her adult life. Her marriage to Prince Charles in 1981 was described as a "fairy tale" by the Archbishop of Canterbury. In the popular imagination, the Prince and Princess, blessed with two young sons, Princes William and Harry, were the glamorous and sympathetic face of the House of Windsor. The very idea that their 10-year marriage was in dire trouble was unthinkable—even to the notoriously imaginative tabloid press.

Shortly afterwards I was to learn the unvarnished truth. The unlikely venue for these extraordinary revelations was a working man's café in the anonymous London suburb of Ruislip. As laborers noisily tucked into plates of egg, bacon and baked beans, I put on a pair of headphones, turned on a battered tape recorder and listened with mounting astonishment to the unmistakable voice of the Princess as she poured out a tale of woe in a rapid stream of consciousness. It was like being transported into a parallel universe, the Princess talking about her unhappiness, her sense of betrayal, her suicide attempts and two things I had never previously heard of: bulimia nervosa, an eating disorder, and a woman called Camilla.

Telling Her Truth
As a kid (ca. the late '60s) "I knew I was going somewhere different but had no idea where," Diana said. Top right: at Kensington Palace after an interview for the book. Below: with Charles in '91.

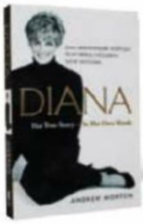
EXCLUSIVE
THE SECRET DIANA INTERVIEWS

In 1991, Princess Diana sat for never-before-revealed interviews that became the basis for Andrew Morton's bestselling biography. With breathtaking candor, she talked about her childhood, the royal family, bulimia and her heartbreaking realization that Prince Charles loved Camilla Parker Bowles. Here are the transcripts—Diana's life, for the first time in her own words



Andrew Morton
The author met the royal through Colthurst. "For her it was tremendously liberating," he writes of Diana's decision to share her story.

She felt somehow that if she was able to explain her story to the people, her people, they could truly understand her before it was too late. "Let them be my judge," she said, confident that her public would not criticize her as harshly as the royal family or the mass media. However, her desire to explain what she saw as the truth of her case was matched by a nagging fear that at any moment her enemies in the palace would have her classified as mentally ill and locked away. This was no idle fear—when her Panorama interview was screened in 1995, the then-Armed

Finding Her Purpose
In the tapes Diana says that Charles had wanted a girl. After Harry's birth (left, in 1984), his "first comment was, 'Oh, God, it's a boy,'" Diana recalled. Inset: visiting with a patient at an AIDS hospice in 1991.

Forces Minister, Nicholas Soames, a close friend and former equerry to Prince Charles, described her as displaying "the advanced stages of paranoia."

Diana was interviewed by proxy, James Colthurst. . . . Armed with a list of questions I had prepared and his tape recorder, Colthurst set off on his bicycle and pedaled nonchalantly up the drive of Kensington Palace. In May 1991 he conducted the first of six taped interviews that continued through the summer and into autumn.

She made a number of alterations [to the manuscript], of fact and emphasis, but only one of any significance, a change which gives an insight into her respect for the Queen. During the interviews she had said that when she threw herself down the stairs at Sandringham while pregnant with Prince William, the Queen was the first on the scene. On the manuscript, Diana altered the text and inserted the Queen Mother's name, presumably out of deference to the Sovereign.

In a letter to James Colthurst some six months before the book's publication, she wrote, "Obviously we are preparing for the volcano to erupt and I do feel better equipped to cope with whatever comes our way! Thank you for your belief in me and for taking the trouble to understand this mind—it's such a relief not to be on my own anymore and that it's okay to be me." ●

Feeling Alone
"I've never been a selfish person. But Charles was always telling me I was being selfish, and I sort of believed it," Diana (with her husband in 1981) said.

The Tapes' 5 Biggest Shocks: In Diana's Own Words

Her fans saw a picture-perfect princess, but behind the palace walls the world's most famous woman was falling apart. Battling bulimia, suicidal thoughts and ongoing "rage" sparked by her husband's affair with Camilla Parker Bowles, Diana poured her misery into the tapes she recorded for Morton. "I was thrown into the deep end," she said of royal life. "Nobody ever helped me at all."

Her Hidden Battles

Top: Charles and Diana's wedding on July 29, 1981; Diana's slim frame raised eyebrows in '82; Diana and Camilla in '80. Diana told Morton that when she learned of Charles's affair, she wanted to call off the wedding. Confiding in her sisters Sarah and Jane, they said, "Your face is on the tea towels, so you're too late to chicken out." The night before, "I had a very bad fit of bulimia," she told Morton.

1. She learned about Charles and Camilla's affair before the wedding. Somebody in [Charles's] office told me that my husband had had a bracelet made for [Camilla], which she wears to this day. . . . It's got "G and F" entwined in it, "Gladys" and "Fred"—they were their nicknames. I walked into this man's office one day and said, "Oh, what's in that parcel?" He said, "Oh, you shouldn't look at that." I opened it, and there was a bracelet, and I said, "I know where this is going." I was devastated. This was about two weeks before we got married. . . . So rage, rage, rage! "Why can't you be honest with me?" But, no, [Prince Charles] cut me absolutely dead. It's as if he had made his decision. . . . He'd found the virgin, the sacrificial lamb.

2. Her bulimia began after Prince Charles called her "chubby." The bulimia started the week after we got engaged. My husband put his hand on my waistline and said, "Oh, a bit chubby here, aren't we?" and that triggered off something in me—and the Camilla thing, I was desperate. . . . I remember the first time I made myself sick. I was so thrilled because I thought this was the release of tension. The first time I was measured for my wedding dress I was 29 inches around the waist. The day I got married I was 23½ inches. I had shrunk into nothing from February to July.

3. She threw herself down the stairs while pregnant with William. Couldn't sleep, didn't eat, whole world was collapsing around me. Very, very difficult pregnancy indeed. Sick the whole time, bulimia and morning sickness. . . . I didn't know which way to turn at all. . . . Charles said I was crying wolf and I said I felt so desperate, and I was crying my eyes out, and he said, "I'm not going to listen. You're always doing this to me. I'm going riding now." So I threw myself down the stairs. The Queen comes out, absolutely horrified, shaking—she was so frightened. I knew I wasn't going to lose the baby; quite bruised around the stomach.

4. She felt suicidal. I was running around with a lemon knife, one with serrated edges. I was just so desperate. I knew what was wrong with me, but nobody else around me understood me. I needed rest and to be looked after inside my house and for people to understand the torment and anguish going on in my head.

5. She once confronted Camilla at a dinner party. I said to Camilla, "Would you like to sit down?" So we sat down and I was utterly terrified of her, and I said, "Camilla, I would just like you to know that I know exactly what is going on." She said, "I don't know what you're talking about!" And I said, "I know what's going on between you and Charles, and I just want you to know that." . . . She said to me, "You've got everything you ever wanted. You've got all the men in the world falling in love with you, and you've got two beautiful children. What more could you want?" I didn't believe her, so I said, "I want my husband."

JACK ANTONOFF

A Shy Guy Who Rocks

THIS POP HITMAKER ISN'T MUCH FOR WILD PARTIES. HE'D RATHER KICK BACK AT HOME WITH LENA DUNHAM

By JEFF NELSON

For a man with a knack for crafting chart-toppers, Jack Antonoff is a surprisingly retiring fellow. "The biggest complaint my friends and family have is, 'You never say anything—you just wanna watch Frasier!' And I do," he says. Onstage he may sing infectious hits. In the studio he may make millions for fellow pop stars. And yes, he lives in Brooklyn with Girls creator Lena Dunham. But really, he's happiest on the couch, binge-watching '90s television. As he puts it: "I joke I do better sharing with a few million people than I do with my immediate family."

Somehow, the soft-spoken 33-year-old from Woodcliffe Lake, N.J., has Antonoff and girlfriend Lena Dunham (in February) met on a blind date in 2012.

MATTHEW SALACUSE; (INSET) JEFF KRAVITZ/FILMMAGIC

Close Family Ties

Antonoff and his sister Rachel celebrated with pal Taylor Swift at the 2016 Grammys. He cowrote and coproduced her record 1989. Inset: The musician (with dad Rick in a throwback Instagram post) grew up in a close-knit New Jersey family. His love of the Garden State inspired Bleachers' new album. "That's a torch that I feel passionate about carrying."

thrived in a field that favors extroverts. In 2013 "We Are Young," his song with the quirkily named and punctuated band fun., became a Grammy-winning generational anthem. His collaboration with Dunham's pal Taylor Swift delivered the musical juggernaut that was her record 1989. He's had a hand in Swift's pal Lorde's new record Melodrama. As the frontman of his new band, the indie pop act Bleachers, he's just released a confessional new album, Gone Now. All of it has helped Antonoff find a voice far bolder than his everyday one. "Songwriting can be this tool to connect with people and talk about what you are going through," he says. "There's two parts of us: the part that moves forward and the part that's frozen. It's very much a then versus now."

Antonoff's "then" is a childhood touched by tragedy. The middle of three children raised in the suburbs by parents Rick and Shira, he showed a love of music early, performing in a punk rock band in elementary school. Along with his older sister, fashion designer Rachel, now 36, Antonoff went on to New York's Professional Children's School; by his teens he was touring. But when he was 18, his younger sister Sarah died of brain cancer at 13. Then with the band Steel Train, Antonoff spiraled into anxiety and depression. Deep sadness from the experience still informs his music. "I talk a lot about loss," he says of Gone Now, which explores the theme of "making sense of loss in the past—and about moving on with what you can and can't take with you."

Those transitions haven't always been easy. Antonoff lived with his parents until he was 27. When Bleachers recently went on tour, he replicated his childhood bedroom in a movable trailer. "I talk so much about how you can't leave it all behind," he says of his work. "But you can't take it all because then life becomes too heavy." Dunham, 31, whom Antonoff met on a blind date five years ago, has helped ease the load. The pair share a home that has a tree with their initials carved in it out front. "It's pretty normal in terms of everyday life," Antonoff says of his relationship, which he sums up as "trying to support each other [and] trying to find something new and exciting for dinner." For her part Dunham has credited Bleachers with having given Antonoff "confidence in himself and his aesthetic." That doesn't mean he'll go clubbing into the wee hours any time soon. "When you go all over the world for work, your dream vacation is your bedroom," Antonoff explains. That being the case, he and Dunham celebrated his new record in their typical wild and crazy way. "We just rewatched Arrested Development!" he says with a smile. "It's hilarious I ended up a musician." ●

Fighting for the Children of Flint

AFTER DISCOVERING THAT MORE THAN 6,000 KIDS HAD BEEN EXPOSED TO LEAD IN THE WATER SUPPLY, DR. MONA HANNA-ATTISHA BECAME THEIR ADVOCATE By CAITLIN KEATING

A Hero for All Kids

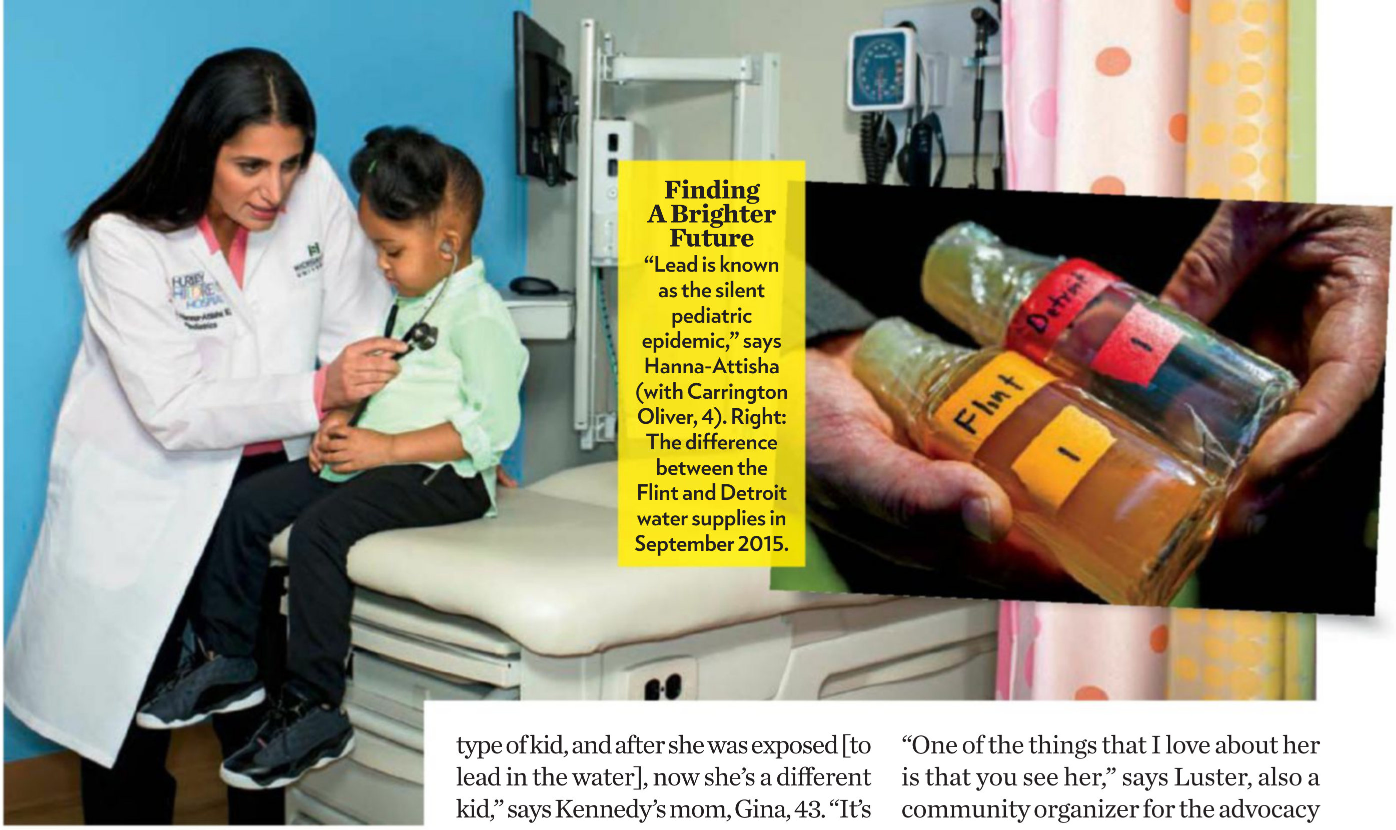
It was almost two decades ago when Dr. Mona Hanna-Attisha first fell in love with Flint, Mich., home to Michigan State University, where she attended medical school. "It's a city that's not hard to fall in love with," she says. "The people are resilient, they're proud and they're grateful." Which is why, in August 2015, when Hanna-Attisha—who had been a pediatrician in Flint since 2011—heard that lead might be contaminating the city's water supply, she knew she had to do something. "My involvement started the minute I heard the word 'lead,'" she says.

Over the next few weeks Hanna-Attisha's research would show that the lead levels in babies and children up to age 6 (the most vulnerable to the debilitating effects of lead poisoning, including nerve damage, cognitive issues and behavioral problems such as hyperactivity) had doubled—even tripled in some areas. The alarming results dated back to April 2014, when, in an effort to cut costs, Flint's water-supply source was switched from Detroit's water system to the Flint River. But the river hadn't been properly treated for corrosion control, leading to damage and corrosion in the system's lead-based pipes. "I was absolutely heartbroken [because] this was entirely preventable," says Hanna-Attisha, 40, who has two daughters, Nina, 11, and Layla, 8, with husband, Elliott, 46, also a pediatrician. "When I saw that data, my focus became the kids of Flint and their tomorrow. I



Finding A Brighter Future
"Lead is known as the silent pediatric epidemic," says Hanna-Attisha (with Carrington Oliver, 4). Right: The difference between the Flint and Detroit water supplies in September 2015.

rolled up my sleeves because we owe it to them."

Now one of the city's most outspoken clean-water advocates, Hanna-Attisha helped form the Michigan State University-Hurley Children's Hospital Pediatric Public Health Initiative, dedicated to improving the health of Flint's 20,000-plus children. She's already opened an early-childhood center where local kids and their families receive nutrition and health-care services and raised $20 million overall. "It's amazing we've done this in just one year," she says.

Among the children being treated at the center is 9-year-old Kennedy Luster. "All I know is that at one time I had one type of kid, and after she was exposed [to lead in the water], now she's a different kid," says Kennedy's mom, Gina, 43. "It's a daily struggle. She can't concentrate, she's having breathing, skin and hair issues. I was pumping my baby with poison," she adds. "I have to live with that guilt the rest of my life."

And because the symptoms of lead poisoning often go undetected until years after exposure, many Flint families are left to wait and wonder about their loved ones' futures. "Think of it like PTSD for an entire community," says Hanna-Attisha. "What we're seeing is almost a loss of hope."

In response, this past February she launched a video campaign, Flint Kids Are—"done by the kids, for the kids, where they're saying, 'We're here to tell you that Flint kids are strong, we're smart, we're healthy and we're going to make a difference,'" says Hanna-Attisha.

When she's not seeing patients, Hanna-Attisha can usually be found at town hall meetings or talking with parents in the farmers' market next to her clinic. "One of the things that I love about her is that you see her," says Luster, also a community organizer for the advocacy group Flint Rising. "She's always willing to talk. She's never not answered a question for me."

And Hanna-Attisha has no plans to quiet down anytime soon. Thanks in great part to her efforts, this past December the U.S. Congress approved more than $100 million in legislation to, among other things, help rebuild Flint's drinking-water infrastructure—even though it will likely take years before the project makes any tangible difference to the community. In the meantime families throughout the city are still required to drink bottled water and put filters on their kitchen faucets—measures Hanna-Attisha helps enforce. "We have to do everything we can to mitigate this exposure," she says. She's also working on opening a second early-childcare center and compiling a large-scale registry to identify and help track Flint children and their progress. "We're not giving up on these kids," she says. "We're really hopeful that we can turn the story around." ●

WHAT'S IN THE WATER?

Flint isn't the only city in the United States that's facing a water crisis. In 2015, 77 million Americans—roughly a quarter of the population—were served by water systems where contaminants have been found at levels higher than the EPA considers safe, according to a recent report from the Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC). While lead is a major issue, bacteria and very old pipes are pervasive problems as well. "We worry a lot about what the health implications are," says NRDC health program director Erik Olson. "We know that with many contaminations it can be very serious. We recommend that people find out about their water."

SPOTLIGHT

Lucy Hale

THE STAR SHARES HER THOUGHTS ON LIPSTICK, LINER AND LIFE AFTER PRETTY LITTLE LIARS

After seven seasons of playing Aria Montgomery on PLL . . .

I'm excited to do new projects. [Hale will return to TV in the CW series Life Sentence and also appear on the big screen in the thriller Truth or Dare next year.] I'm sure it'll be hard for people to dissociate me from Aria but I'm excited for that challenge.

My latest haircut was inspired by . . .

French girls. I brought all these pictures to my hairstylist Kristin Ess, and she did her thing. This is the shortest I've ever been [far right]! There are days when I miss being able to braid it, but I like it because it's so low-maintenance. I just live on dry shampoo.

If I could sum up my approach to skin care in one word, it'd be . . .

Insane. I'm 28 and have been using eye cream since I was 13 and anti-aging cream since I was 16. I struggled with my skin for a really long time, so I make sure that I'm taking good care of it with facials, lasers and a 30-minute routine at night using serums and lotions and all that jazz.

"I love a crazy bold lip," says the actress.

My makeup mantra is . . .

Be adventurous! Mark. by Avon [she's its brand ambassador] is all about trying new things, so I'm venturing out and doing looks I would normally be scared of. I'm usually more into lipstick, but my makeup artist Kelsey Deenihan recently talked me into wearing emerald eyeliner [right] and it turned out really cool!

My relationship with Instagram . . .

Is tricky. I enjoy it, but it can definitely be a dark hole, so some days I'll just delete the app from my phone. I love being free from technology for a little bit. I think it's important.

I find balance by . . .

Taking moments for myself every day. I always get a nap in, and I talk to my family every day too. Those things give me a good sense of normalcy, which is nice.

"The simple things make me happy, like my dog Elvis," says Hale.

BEHIND THE BOB

"I always wanted to go short, but my hair was my security blanket for a long time. When I finally realized I didn't need all that hair anymore and cut it, I came into my own," reveals Hale (pictured pre-chop in 2014).

MIRIAM SHOR

What I Eat in a Day

'EATING IS ONE OF LIFE'S GREATEST JOYS, AND I WILL NEVER PUNISH MYSELF FOR IT,' SAYS THE 5'6" STAR OF YOUNGER, 45

Hydration

"I drink as much water as I can when I remember."

TIP! TRY SWAPPING SUGAR WITH STEVIA TO LOWER YOUR SWEETS INTAKE, SAYS MOORE

Breakfast

Cup of black tea with whole milk and 1 tsp. of sugar, half an order of pancakes with butter and syrup, Halumi eggs and salad, ordered from Cafe Mogador in New York City

Lunch

Fresh mozzarella, tomato and basil salad

Snack

Large handful of nuts and organic popcorn

'I walk 2 to 7 miles a day, sometimes with a 4-year-old on my shoulders. I'm a New York City mom, and that's just how we roll'

—MIRIAM SHOR

Dinner

Apple and cheddar salad with apple cider vinaigrette, 6 pieces of very thin pizza with mozzarella, mushrooms, basil and olives, and her daughter's leftover broccoli, ordered from Gruppo in New York City

Dessert

⅓ of her daughter's leftover chocolate Easter bunny and three glasses of wine

Total Calories: 2,966

The Verdict "Miriam's breakfast is healthy and fun," says Atlanta-based dietitian Marisa Moore. "The eggs provide protein, and by splitting the pancakes, she can still enjoy a breakfast favorite." Including a salad and a side of broccoli, plus veggie toppings on the pizza, were also great choices, says Moore. However, "a lighter dinner, with a slice or two less, might help her get the best sleep." But overall "I love her balanced approach to meals."

1½	cups unsalted butter, softened, plus more for pans
4	cups all-purpose flour, plus more for pans
4	tsp. baking powder
1	tsp. table salt
2½	cups granulated sugar
5	large eggs
1¼	cups whole milk
2	tsp. vanilla extract
1	tsp. blue food coloring
1½	tsp. red food coloring
4½	tbsp. strawberry jam
3	cups ready-to-spread buttercream frosting

1. Preheat oven to 350°. Butter 3 (9x3-inch) round cake pans; line with parchment paper. Butter and flour parchment paper.

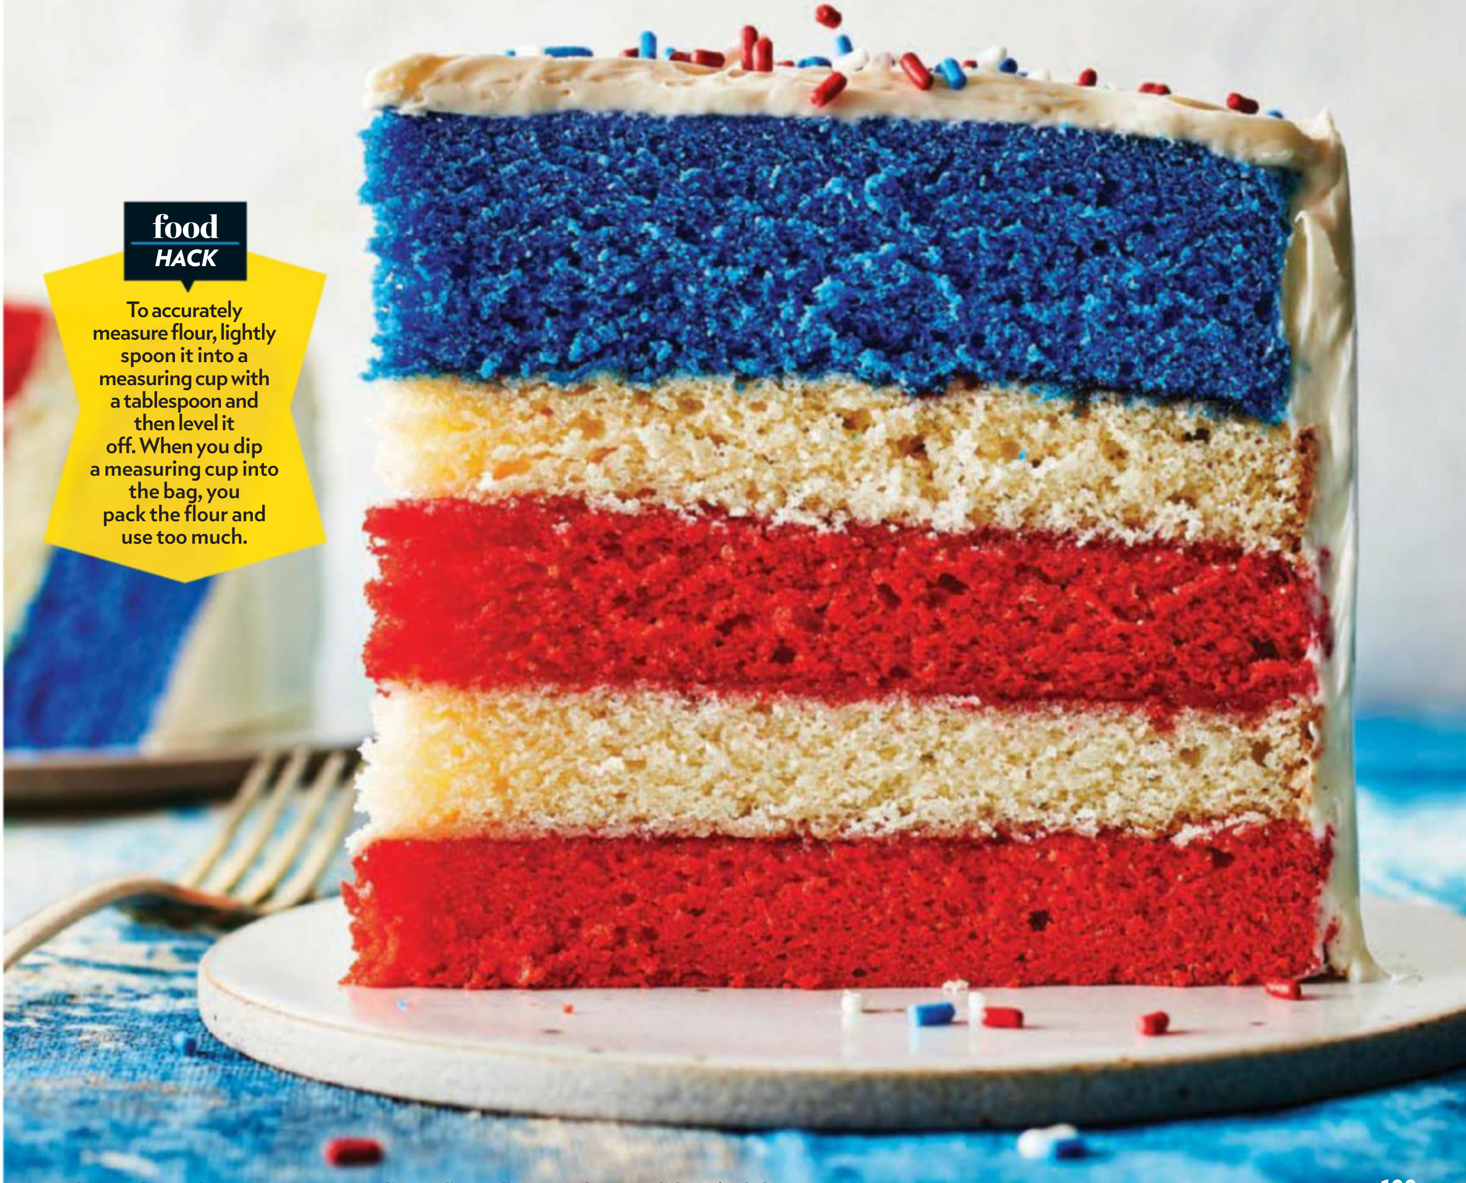
2. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt; set aside. Combine sugar and butter in the bowl of a stand mixer, and beat on medium speed until light and fluffy, about 5 minutes. Add eggs, 1 at a time, beating until blended after each addition. Gradually add flour mixture alternately with milk, beating on low speed until blended after each addition. Beat in vanilla extract.

3. Divide batter evenly among 3 bowls (about 3 cups per bowl). Stir blue food coloring into 1 bowl. Stir red food coloring in another bowl. Leave remaining bowl white. Pour batter into prepared pans, and smooth top.

4. Bake until a toothpick inserted in center comes out clean, 23 to 25 minutes. Cool in pans 10 minutes; run a knife around edge of cakes, and remove from pans. Cool completely on a wire rack, about 1 hour.

5. To assemble: Split white cake layer and red cake layer in half horizontally. Spread a thin layer of jam on top of each half. Stack cake alternating red and white layers. Top with blue cake layer. Spread frosting over top and sides of cake and serve.

Makes: 1 (9-inch) cake
Active time: 20 minutes
Total time: 1 hour, 55 minutes



food HACK

To accurately measure flour, lightly spoon it into a measuring cup with a tablespoon and then level it off. When you dip a measuring cup into the bag, you pack the flour and use too much.

Toffee Popcorn Balls

THE EXECUTIVE CHEF OF ESTRELLA AND SWEETFIN POKE IN LOS ANGELES OFFERS A SWEET TREAT ON A STICK

3 qts. popped popcorn
1 cup light-brown sugar
½ cup unsalted butter
¼ cup corn syrup
1 tsp. table salt
1 tbsp. vanilla extract
1 tsp. baking soda
Cooking spray
2 oz. white vanilla candy melts
2 oz. red vanilla candy melts
2 oz. blue vanilla candy melts

1. Place popped popcorn in a large bowl.
2. Place brown sugar, butter, corn syrup and salt in a medium saucepan over medium-high heat; bring to a boil, stirring occasionally. Cook, without stirring, until a candy thermometer registers 270°. Remove pan from heat. Carefully stir in vanilla and baking soda. (Mixture will bubble up.) Pour mixture over popcorn; toss until well coated. Let stand until slightly cooled, 1 to 2 minutes.

4. Melt red, white and blue candy melts according to package directions, 1 color at a time. Dip each ball in the white candy to coat completely, letting any excess drip off. Drizzle red and blue candy evenly over balls. Let stand until set, about 15 minutes. Store in an airtight container.

Jay Leno

THE FORMER TONIGHT SHOW HOST, 67, STARS IN THE NEW SEASON OF CNBC'S JAY LENO'S GARAGE

Last superstition
I always kiss my wife [Mavis] goodbye when I leave. If I go out the door and come back to get something, I have to kiss her again. I think something will happen if I don't.

Last vacation
I'm not a vacation guy. I don't think I've even been in our pool in 25 years. My mother always said to me, "You're going to have to work twice as hard as the other kids to get the same things." Every time I get near it, I hear that Boston voice in my head: "You've got nothing broken? You're going to sit in the pool in the middle of the day?"

Last time I was injured
About eight weeks ago I was in a race car for my show. You had to crawl in through the doors, and when the guys were pulling me out, I dislocated my shoulder. Oh yeah, it hurt. But once it was popped back in, I was fine.

Last time I was starstruck
I was 18 or 19 and I saw Art Garfunkel at Logan airport. For some reason I hid behind a pole. To this day I don't know why I did that. I never did meet him.

Last time I danced
Just for fun, my wife and I occasionally dance in this rock-back-and-forth way you see kids do awkwardly. It always makes her laugh. It's our impression of Jay and Mavis at the prom.
